A two-line local item in yesterday's Times furnished a false clue whereby a Barre woman who has not seen her husband in four years, expected to gain some definite information as to his whereabouts. Had the item telling of the return of George Maynard to Wareham, Mass., referred to the George Maynard who disappeared from Barre four years ago, it would have been the first information Mrs. Maynard has had of her husband since 1910. In that year he became missing and a careful search as well as many inquiries have failed to develop any facts that would point to his whereabouts. When Mrs. Maynard read the item in yesterday's paper, she hurried to The Times office, only to learn that the man who figured in the news is a traveling shoe man, who visits Barre frequently.

The funeral of Frank C. Dyer, a former resident of Barre and for several years engaged here as a city mail carrier, will be held at the Pond Village church in Brookfield Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, according to present arrangements. Mrs. Dyer is accompanying the remains and they will be taken from Randolph to Brookfield at once. Mrs. Walter Morse, formerly of Barre, who arrived in Randolph for a visit 10 days ago, has charge of the arrangements. St. Alde-mar commandery and other allied Masonic societies to which Mr. Dyer belonged in Barre, will be represented at the services in Brookfield. Interment will be made in that village.

From the number of entries made for the horse race, which is to form a part of the Central Labor celebration at the Ayers street park Monday, it is apparent that one of the most interesting track events in several years is in store for those who make the big picnic their celebrating place Labor day. At the office of the racing committee this morning the following list of entries was announced: "Iola," C. C. Mears of North Montpelier; "Lester," W. A. Lapoint of Bradbury of Washington; "Nancy," Dr. P. S. Duffy of Barre; "Dr. Scudder" and "Elmdale," Lowell McLeod of this city. Additional entries are expected before the list is closed Saturday night and persons desiring to start their horses when the bell rings around noon Monday are urged to get in touch with the committee at once. Charles H. Gordon of the Smith Stock farm has consented to act as a starter and H. C. Leonard will be the timer. The judges, chosen from the Central Labor union, are Henry Alexander, Alexander Ritchie and Will McDonald. The race is designated as the 2:30 class and it will be the only event of its kind in the celebration.
